About the Report

This report describes Women's empowerment is a complex, multi-dimensional, fluid and emerging concept with feminism and development literature. It has economic, political, social, cultural, religious, personal, psychological and emotional elements. Empowerment appears to be context-specific and has multiple determinants. Women are capable of empowering themselves while external actors and agencies can create supportive environments. A number of initiatives have been taken by government, donors and ngos to increase women's empowerment and ensure their legal, economic and political equality. However, since the problems are complex, multi-dimensional and overwhelming it will take a long time for women to achieve empowerment and equality.
